The Process

Once we agree on the reference photo and finished size of your portrait, I will e-mail you a price estimate. If this is agreeable, I need you to sign the estimate and return it back to me along with a 50% down payment. Once I receive this, your portrait will be included in my work schedule and I will advise you of an expected delivery date. Typically, if I don't have other clients ahead of you, it will take four to five weeks to finish your portrait. I will call you when the piece is completed and set up a time for your approval. If you are an out of state client, I will e-mail a low-res jpeg image for your approval. When the drawing is approved, the balance due must be paid. After confirmation of payment, your custom portrait will be shipped to you immediately. If you are not satisfied with the final piece and I cannot develop the drawing to your satisfaction, I will refund your deposit in full... in which case the portrait will remain in my possession.

Helpful Hints

A good quality photo reference with the greatest amount of detail is critical to the success of your portrait. The subject's face must be at least three inches tall in order for me to see the necessary detail. The very best references are digital photos sent to me on a CD. Use the highest resolution your camera supports. A digital reference gives me the greatest amount of detail to work from. The better the detail, the better your portrait will be. If you'd like to use a professional studio photo, you will need to provide me with written permission from the photographer.

I will work closely with you in choosing a photo, and help you decide on a size and format best fitting your needs and budget. It is important to me that my portrait work be acquirable for all.

Please don't hesitate to contact me with your questions or concerns. You can send me an e-mail or contact me by phone.
